MEMORANDUM

The undersigned is licensed as an attorney, but is computer illiterate. The undersigned was notified from an exemption is possible. Using an analogy. If I could ont drive my car, I could hire a chauffer. However, if my job was to pilot an air craft, I would not be qualified if I could not pilot the air craft and merely hired a "co-pilot".

Having a secretary who is compute-wise is like hiring chauffer. However, since much of what is done, checking court's docket, etc. is a "lawyer" requirement, I must "pilot" the plane. I do not want to be computer literate. At my age (in my youth I was an infantryman in the Vietnam War), I am "too old a dog to learn new tricks". I do not have the time to learn new tricks.

Therefore, I request an exemption since I will be unable to "co-fly" the plane and would in effect be a passenger not a pilot (lawyer).

As an additional reason I made some inquiries. A colleague told me the "Adobe" "distiller" which is a "program" needed to "do" electronic filing costs in excess of $300.00. I have been unable to learn how much "space" this program will take in my "over crowded" computer. Spending a sum of $300.00 seems like to "unequal" access to the courts.

A final reason exists. My office does not have the "hardware" and "software" requirements.

My secretary informs me we do not have per page 4 of Electronic Case Filing CM/ECF Attorney's Manual:

- a) Netscape Navigator
- b) A scanner
